I audited 50+ SaaS landing pages before building my own. Here is what I refused to do.

Landing pages that book demos for Early Stage B2B SaaS, delivered in 12 days.

Most early-stage pages don't book demos because the copy's weak, the design's cluttered, or the code breaks on mobile. I handle all three in 12 days.

Your landing page is bleeding money

Traffic comes in but nobody books. You're losing thousands in revenue every month and these 3 problems are why.

PROBLEM 01

Weak hero headline

Headlines like 'Financial AI research

PROBLEM 02

Feature-focused copy

Feature lists like 'AI-powered

PROBLEM 03

Zero Social Proof

No case studies, no testimonials.

While building my landing page I had one goal. Be nothing like my competitors. So I refused to do these 5 things.

Fake testimonials

I had none testimonials on me and instead of faking,
I actually opted for those whom I already had

Ignored placeholder testimonials

"Contract redlining used to drain entire afternoons. Other tools force me to highlight every section manually, then butcher my formatting with clunky replacements.  intelligently reviews whole contracts and surgically edits only the clauses that need attention. I'm not happy right now, mostly because I realized how much time I was wasting before this."

"Application forms with dozens of fields used to mean hours of hunting through spreadsheets and bouncing between browser tabs. Now  automatically draws from my OneDrive files and searches the web, filling everything seamlessly while I focus on the content that matters. The only thing I wish is that I could run it in the background with multiple files at once."

"I was so tired of AI tools that would mess up my document formatting. They'd turn my carefully structured lists into plain paragraphs or break my tables and screw up my fonts.  actually understands Word's formatting and maintains my document structure beautifully. Best Microsoft Word AI Assistant there is."

"The preview feature is brilliant. I can see exactly what  wants to change, and if I click on a reference, it jumps me right to that spot in my document. No more guessing what the AI is going to do

"Writing reports used to mean juggling multiple browser tabs and ChatGPT windows. Now I just tell  what I need and it pulls data from my SharePoint files, does web research, and even allows me to

"I've tried every AI writing tool out there, and they all feel clunky compared to this.  actually edits like a human would, changing just the parts that need changing, not replacing entire paragraphs. It's

Talking only about yourself

Early stage SaaS teams make this mistake often, they just talk about themselves and their SaaS product

I highlighted the pain right after the hero section that creates urgency and targets only one type of buyer

Your landing page is bleeding money

Traffic comes in but nobody books. You're losing thousands in revenue every month and these 3 problems are why.

PROBLEM 01

Weak hero headline

Headlines like 'Financial AI research workspace' tell visitors nothing. Nobody knows what you do, so they bounce in 3 seconds.

PROBLEM 02

Feature-focused copy

Feature lists like 'AI-powered analytics' don't explain the problem you solve. You sound like every competitor no differentiation.

PROBLEM 03

Zero Social Proof

No case studies, no testimonials. You're asking founders to bet their budget on a page that looks like it launched yesterday.

Generic use of headings

'Automating revenue for business' is pure BS, every early-stage SaaS landing page has the same meaning less headling

This headline speaks out clearly and target a single audience

No mention of a UVP

Majority hire 3 different people for 3 things,
I handle 3 by myself, that's the UVP

The subheading marks my UVP, separating me from my competitors

Zero need of high end web animations

There were plenty of landing pages with overloaded animations, even the page failed badly to deliver any point.

I made mine with the only use of Lenis JS aka library for smooth scroll
